UAT Initiation:-

User Acceptance Testing is often treated as the poor relation of testing and is given very little thought until it's time to actually do it. Then there is a mad panic to get something in place to be able to get user sign-off. UAT is probably the most important test phase of all as it is where we confirm that the system is fit for purpose to the business stakeholders.

UAT Design:-

User Acceptance Testing (UAT), or application testing, is the final stage of any software development or change request lifecycle before go-live. It is the final stage of any development process to determine that the software does what it was designed to do in real-world situations.
